

HANS, TIRED OF WALKING GOES ROWING.

BY K. POMMERHANS, MUNICH.

Copyright 1906 by Tribune Company

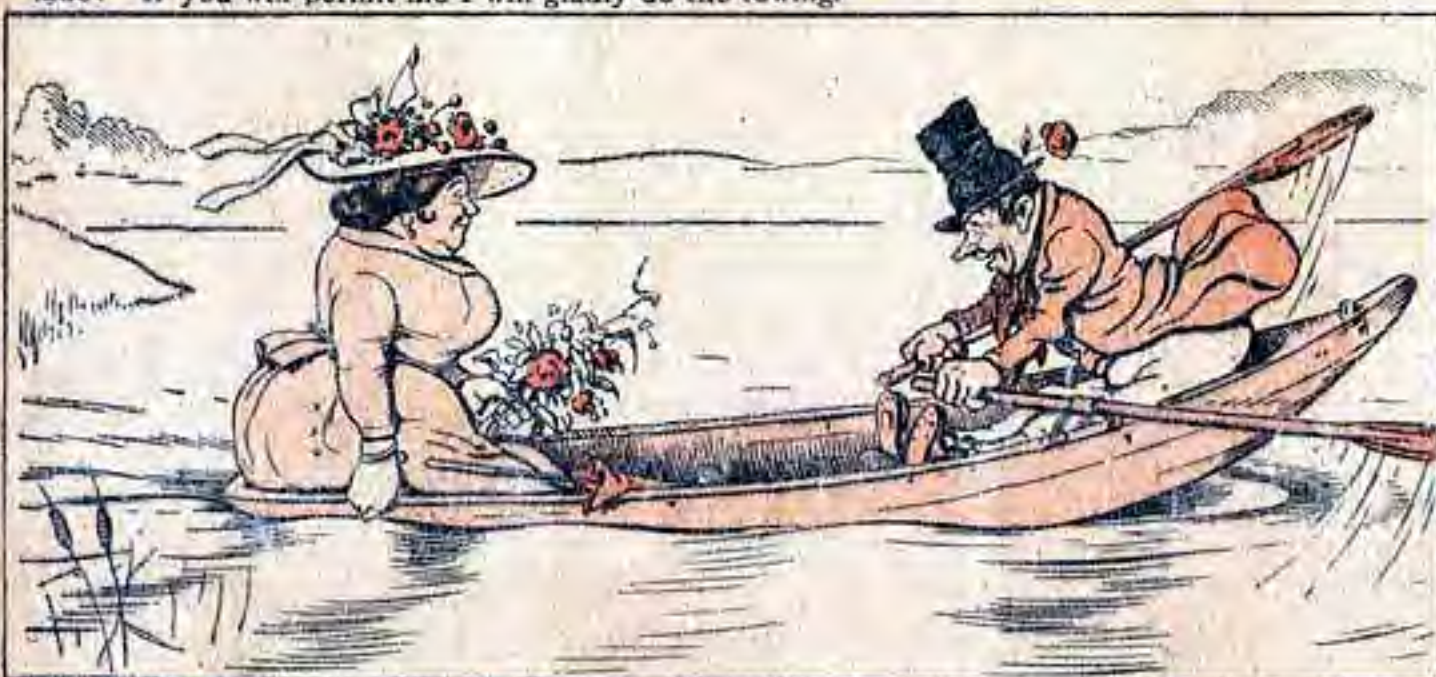

Chicago, Illinois.

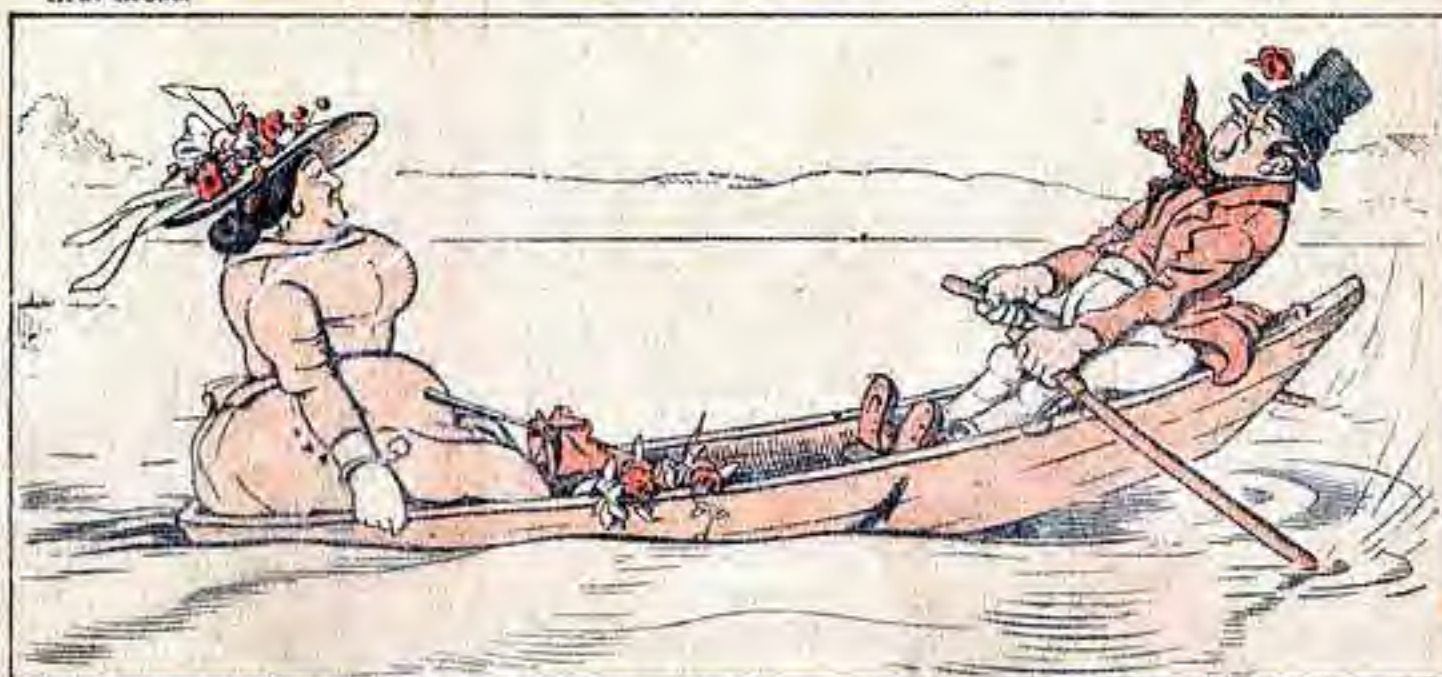

My lovely maiden, perhaps you would like to take a little boat ride with me around the lake? If you will permit me I will gladly do the rowing.

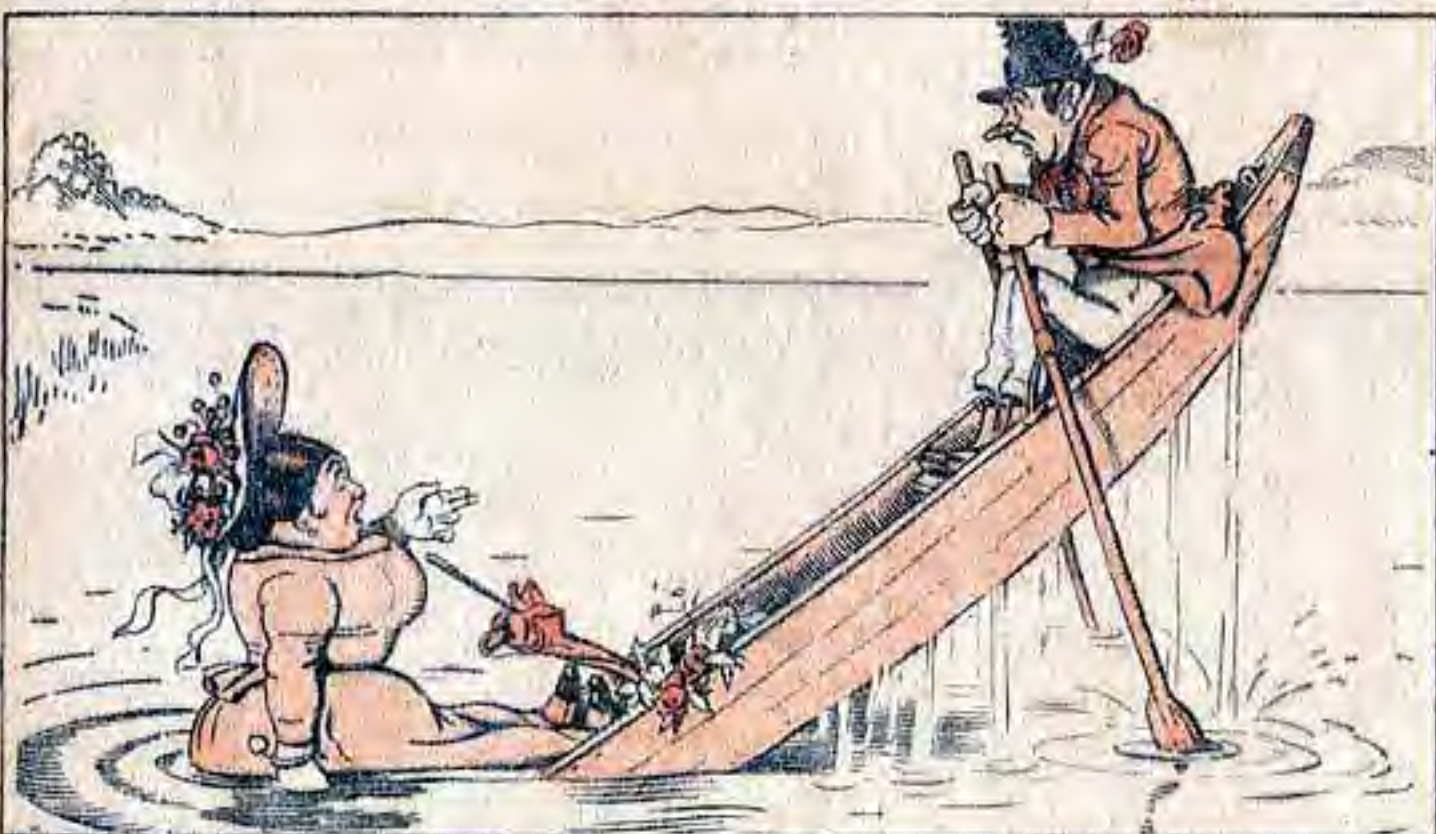

Only please be careful in stepping into the boat and mind that you do not muss your beautiful dress.

Do you notice, my dear, how fast we are going?

Now, what's that? It seems the deep end of the boat is fast and on a sand bar. I must pull with all my might so that I can get over it.

O, this is a beautiful sit-u-ation.

Only don't be so frightened, dear. I'll pull you up here, where it is dry.

So now you're almost up—!!!

We are both in it now!

And just now, my dear, I would not have time to carry a trunk.

Please accept my arm that I may escort your sweetness home.

Hans, On His Travels, Makes Friends With A Puppy.

Copyright 1906 by Tribune Company, Chicago, Illinois.

I rather like that pup. I must try to get him to follow me.

I'll win him with this sausage.

You can't have any of this sausage until you jump over this cane.

What are you trying to do?

That little rascal has ruined my hat.

Just wait, I'll get even with you!

So! Now he's running away with my hat!

It's the only hat I have; I must get it.

—————

Ha! You don't deserve it. But you're a nice little pup-

So just let us be happy now, puppy.

And a drop of cider won't hurt anything either.

Hans Turns Sculptor and Models a Statue in Dough

BY K. PONNERHANE OF MUNICH.

Copyright 1906 by Tribune Company, Chicago, Illinois.

"This baker lady, I believe, is just as rich as she is wicked! I must be careful!"

"My dear lady, would you have the kindness to give me something to eat?"
"Look at that tramp! He's standing right in the middle of my new bread!"

"Get out of here, you—D. Q. at 11!"

"Aha! It seems as if the old lady has gone out. I'll see if I can't get her a good example."

"To think, we'll get a little dough to eat!"

"It gives Hans a bit which and understands a little about modelling."

"This piece of work seems to be coming very fast!"

"Aha! There Hans has taken hold!"

"Aha! How fast! And almost ready to speak!"

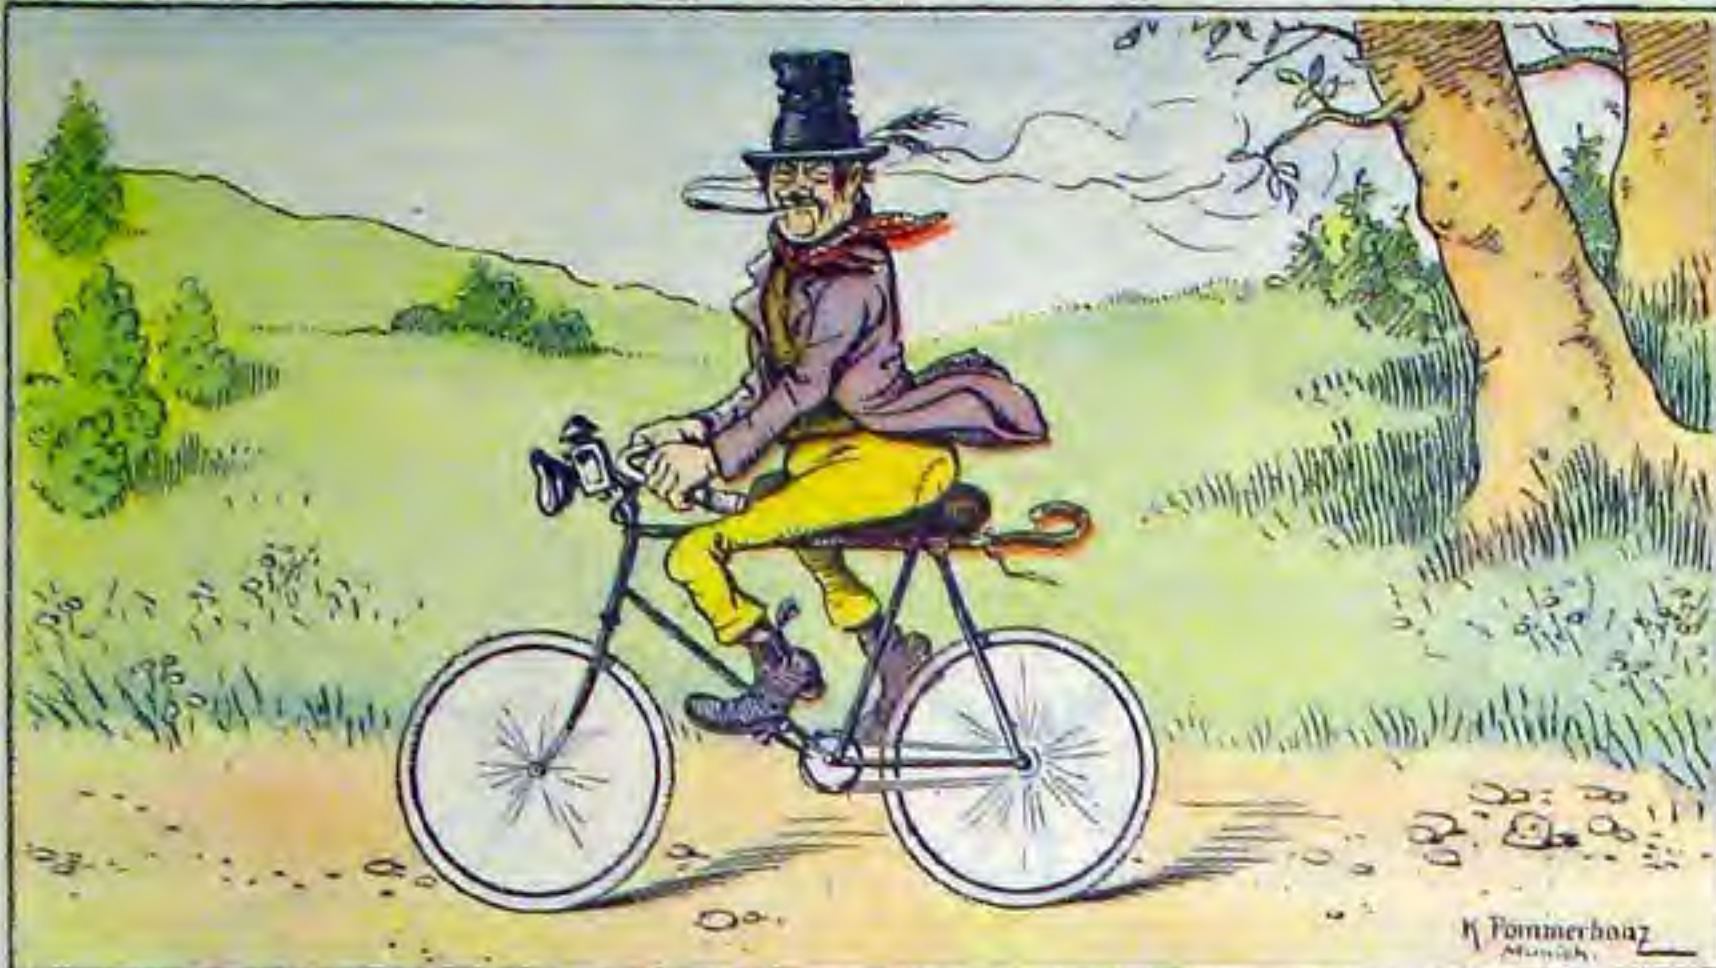

"Maria Joseph! and giggle! There I am already!"

HANS ON HIS TRAVELS HAS A BICYCLE ADVENTURE

BY K. POMMERHANS, MUNICH.

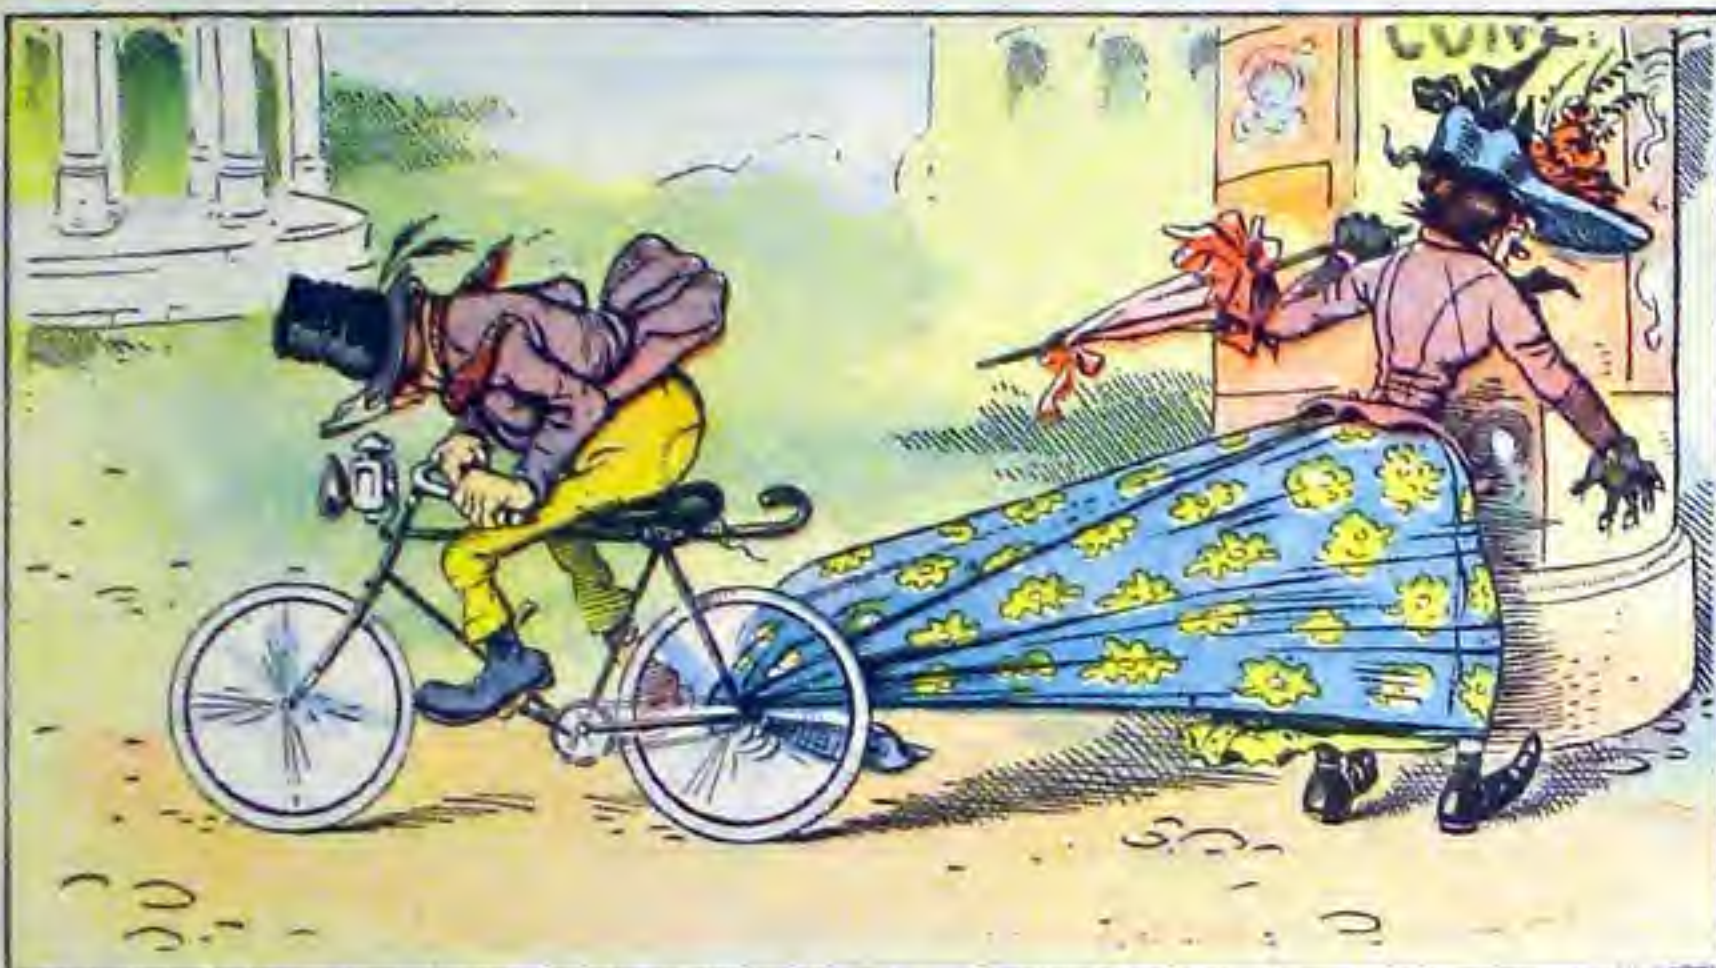

Copyright 1906 by Tribune Company, Chicago, Illinois

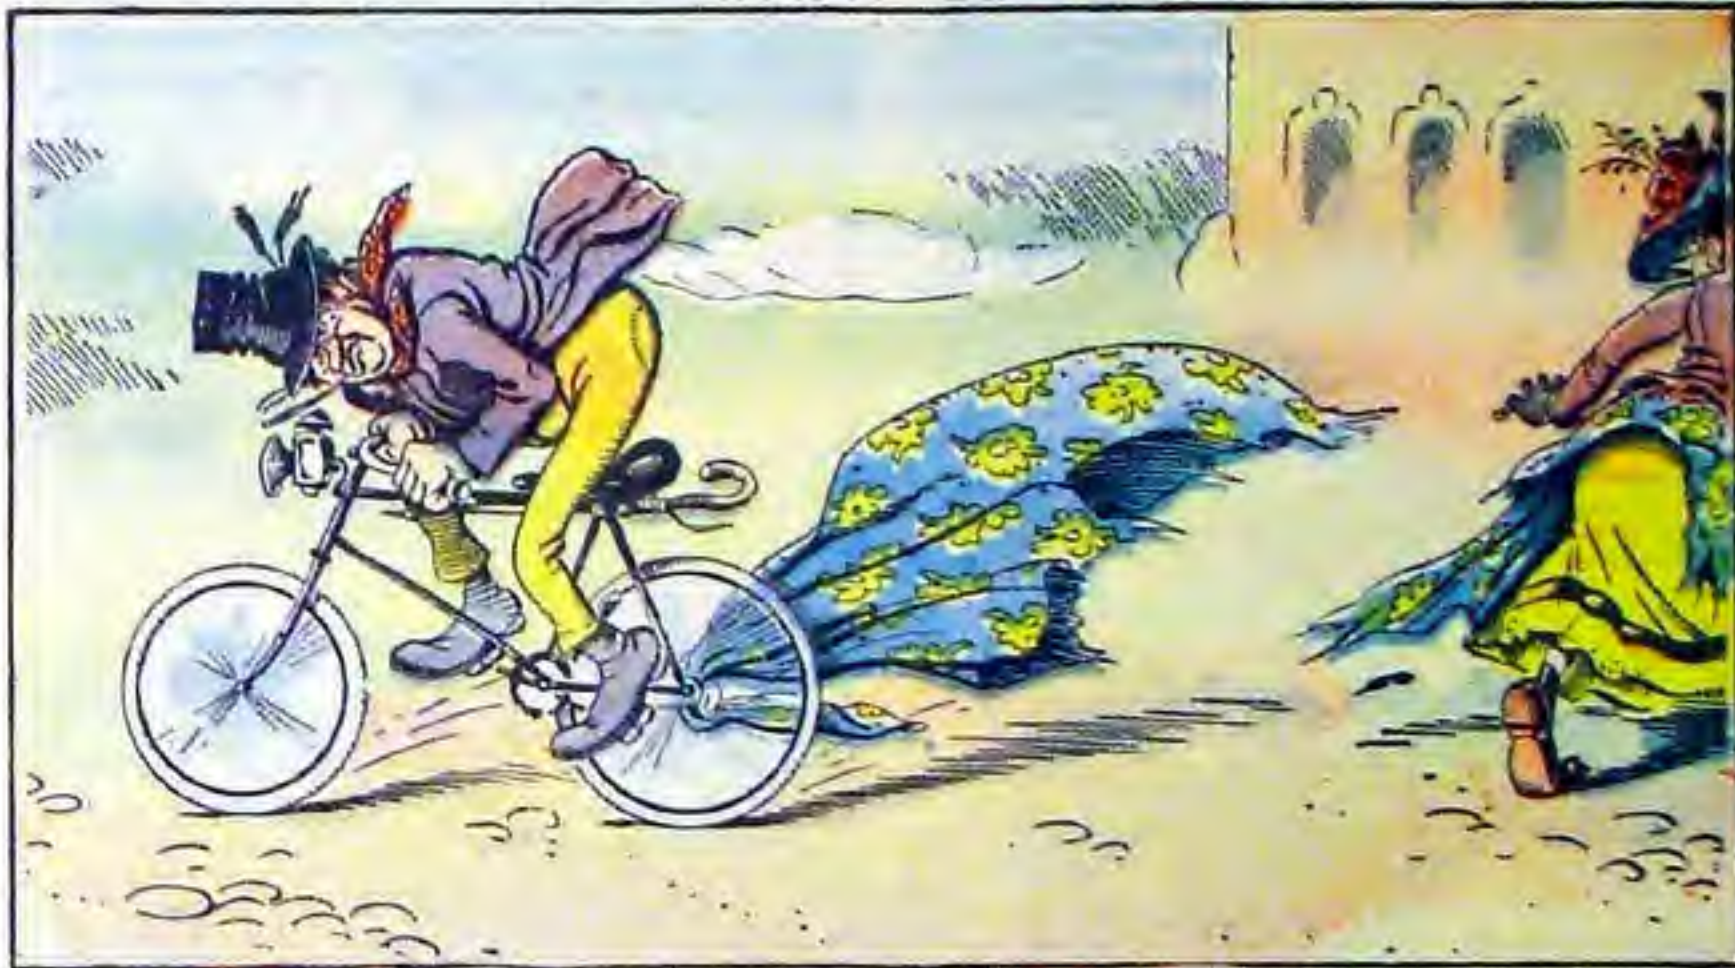

Today a bicycle ran right at me. I'm not much of a rider but I'll practice a little.

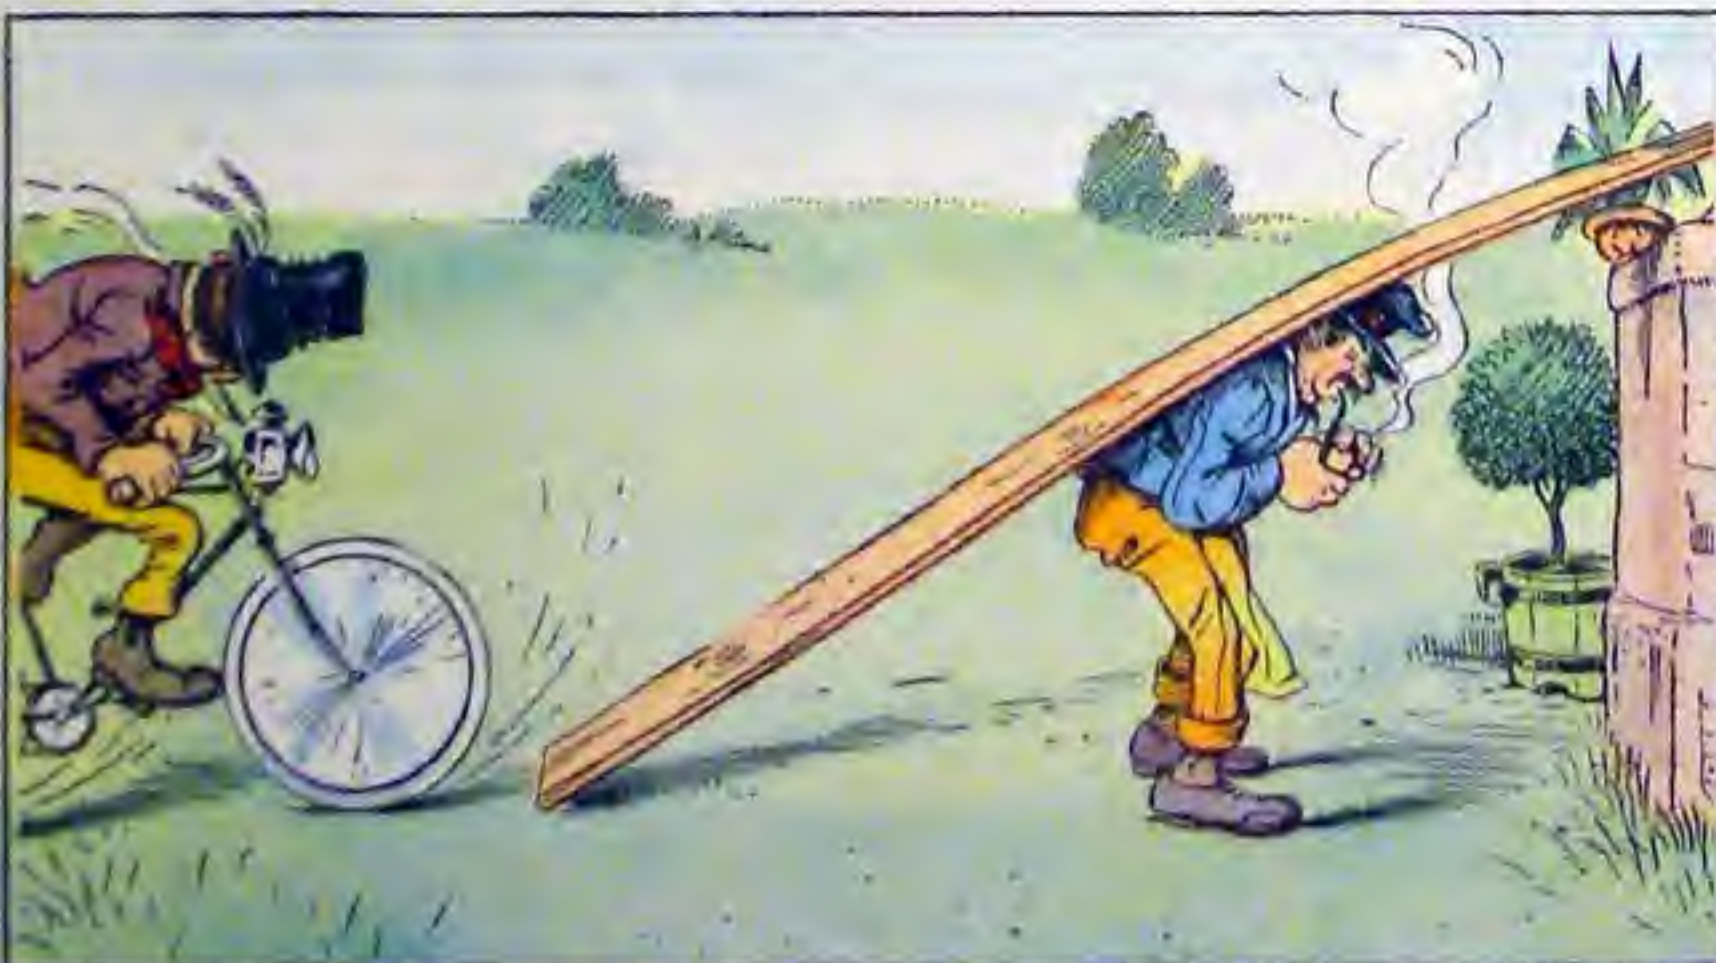

Heavens! I must be riding in China.

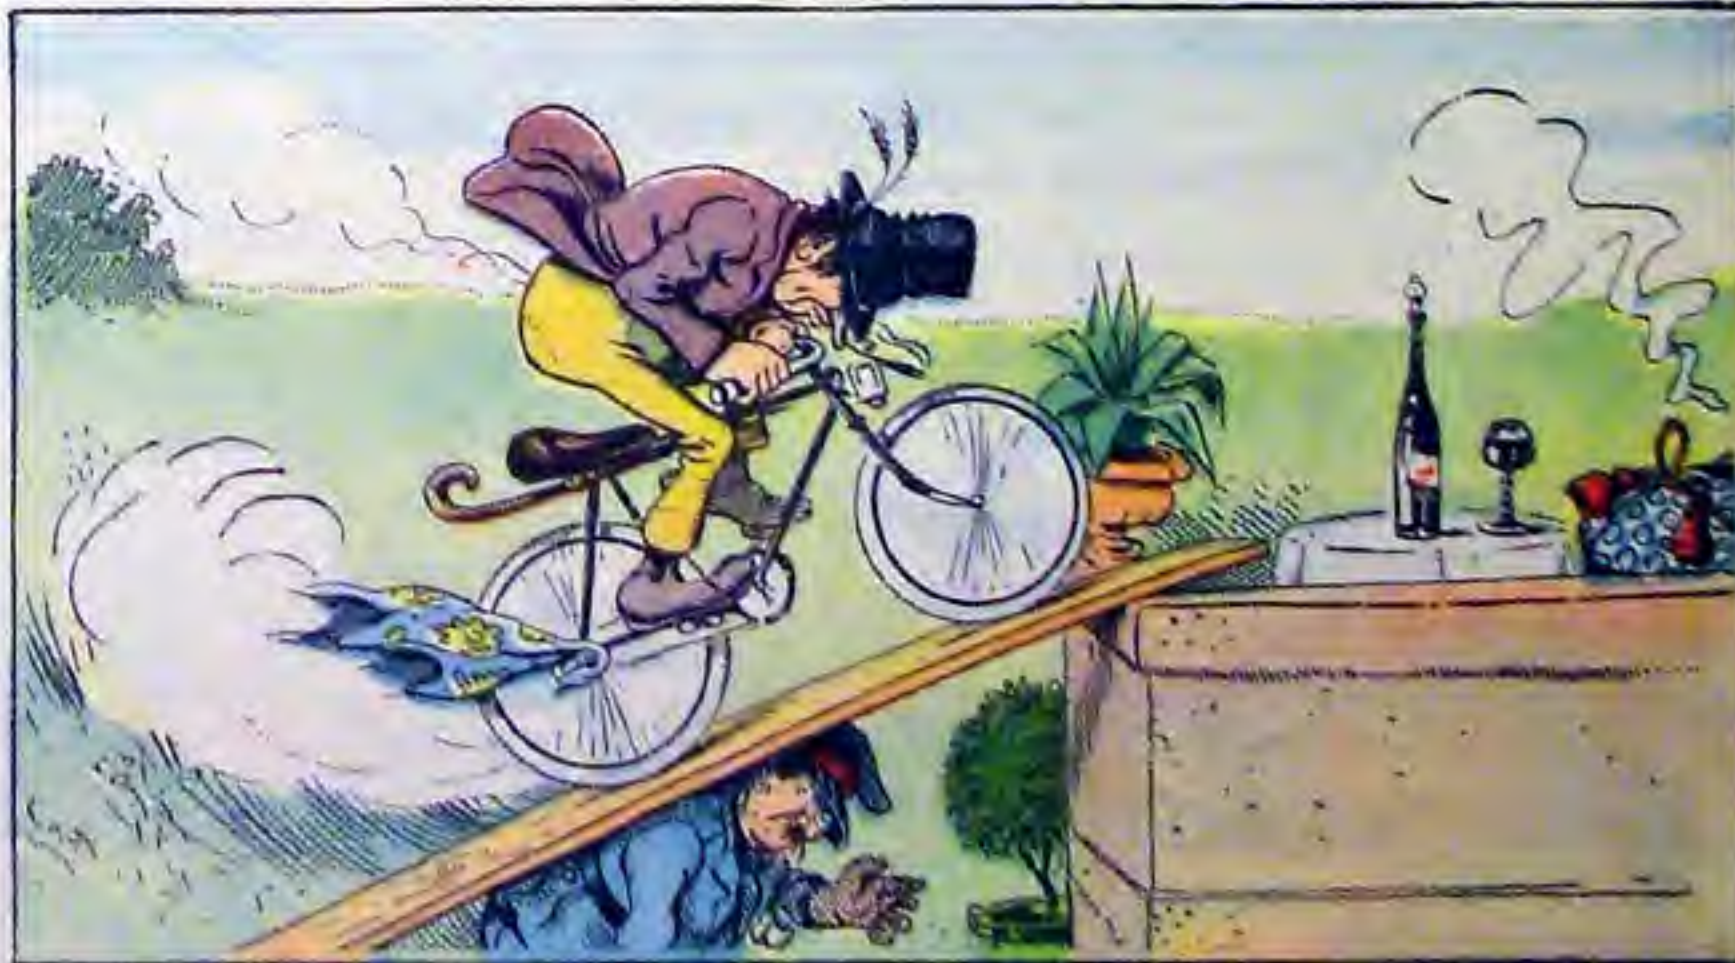

Hoopla! I seem to have attracted a lady's attention.

And she has favored me with a souvenir.

Here's a little hill that I must climb.

Excelsior! I am near the summit.

And here we go merrily down hill.

And pursue our uneventful journey in peace.